

Story for a family rungame

Family Maier wants to make a Daytrip.

The grandparents are very old, so they don't want to go to far by car.

Who shall drive them. The daughter say's that she is going to drive them. Where shall we go?

The father want's into nature for barbecue. The mother want's to a silent lake. But the lake is not possible, because it is difficult for the Grandparents. The son, who has nothing said till yet, said that they could split the Family for the trip: "The parents and I--the son --are driving to the lake for barbecue. The grandparents with the daughter are driving to a nice place, where you can get easy by car." But that's not, what everybody wants—they want the whole family together for the daytrip. The grandparents say's: "Later, when we are not any more, then you can make a daytrip alone."

Then, the son and the daughter had a perfect Idea. "We are searching for a nice place not far away, where the grandparents could stay for a while. Mother and father taking a hike around the lake and the children driving at first to the lake and then making a barbecue at home for the evening, when everyone is at home again. The parents liked the Idea and so it was made.

The daytrip was really nice and the whole family was happy. The children have taken some photos and Mother and father will make a photoalbum from that day.
